The Lie of The Land

The Photographic Meaning of Landscape

John Constable, The Haywain (1821)

Landscapes only become such when they are both made and noticed, acted or lived or thought with some degree of consciousness. They require our participation to be landscapes. Without this, the tree falls unheeded in the forest.

Elizabeth Helsinger, Landscape Theory - Art Seminars (London: Routledge, 2008). p.323.

‘The landscape’ is, as Wolfgang Sachs puts it, ‘the construct of a society that no longer has an unmediated relationship with the soil’. The concept of landscape encodes, measures and reproduces the viewer’s alienation from nature. Landscape measures our distance from land.

Yosemite Valley had, during his (Ansel Adams) decades of photographing it as wilderness, a golf course, a luxury hotel, several camp sites, stores, a school, churches, and even a beauty parlour. Adams cropped it out in the name of Beauty, of formalism, of composition, but all his heirs learned to leave it out too and thus was nature photography created. And what he cropped out, his fellow Americans learned not to see, leaving the American landscape as a chequer-board of scenic wonders and blank spots.

'The murdered mans body was found lying at the Giants Ring beauty spot, once used for pagan rituals. It has now become a regular location for sectarian murder.'

Paul Seawright

Friday 22nd September 1972

'The man left home to go to a bar for a drink, and never returned. He was found the following morning dumped on waste ground behind the Glencairn estate. He had been stabbed in the back and chest, and his body showed signs of torture.'

Tuesday 3rd April 1973

'Late last night a 28 year old man disappeared from a pub. It wasn't until this morning that his body was found abandoned in a quiet park on the coast.'

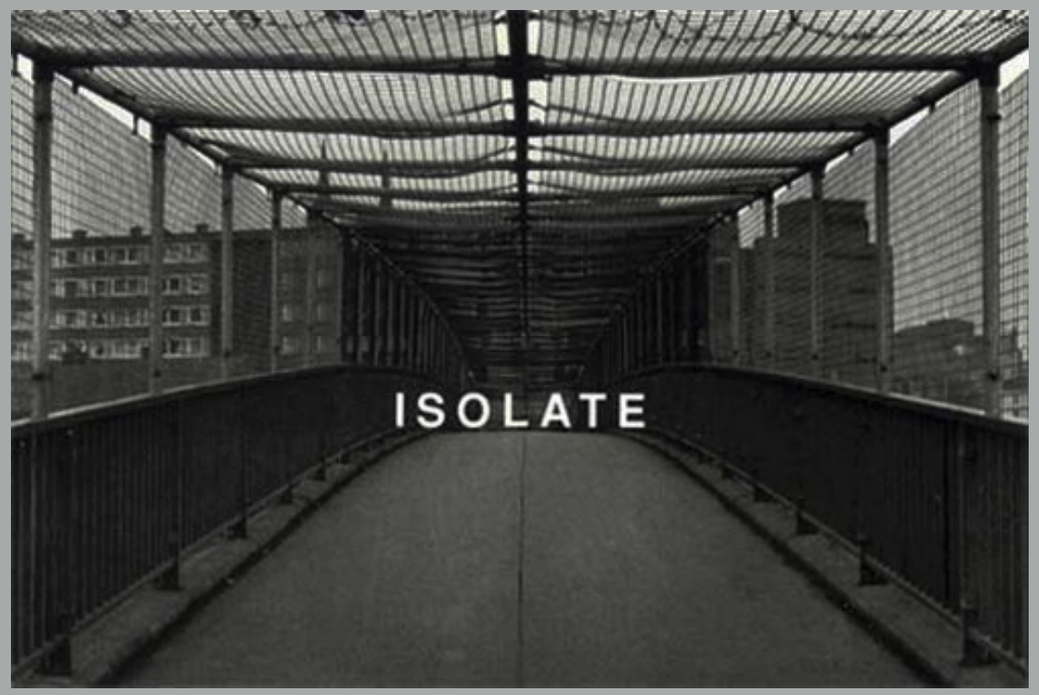

Thursday 14th December 1972

'The sixteen year old youth was standing at the corner of Dandy Street talking, when a motorcycle with two youths on it drove by. The pillion passenger was carrying a Sterling sub-machine gun and opened fire on the group. The boy fell dying in a hail of bullets.'
